As an illustration of the discriminating judgment shown by the gentlemen who are running the Washington jail, they have refused to allow a poor man who is held as a witness, to receive food sent by his brothers, on the ground that it is a violation of prison rules, while Broker Chapman, in the same prison, fares sumptuously on meals sent from a hotel.

Chamber of Commerce.

The annual report of President Jas. H. Chadbourn, Jr., of the Chamber of Commerce, presented at the annual meeting of the Chamber on the 4th of March last, has been published in book form. The report gives a resume of the meetings held the past year, the work accomplished and the progress made and is, in fact, a very able one. The recapitulation, giving an account of the most important events, is a very interesting article.

FIRE ON ANN STREET.

House Owned and Occupied by Colored People Badly Damaged—Insurance Will Not Cover Loss.

About 4.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon an alarm of fire was sent in from box 51, Seventh and Ann streets. Sparks from a blazing chimney had set on fire the roof of a one story frame dwelling back of Ebenezer Baptist Church, colored, on Ann street, between Seventh and Eighth, but the Fire Department succeeded in confining the fire to that building alone, and finally suppressed it, after about thirty minutes hard work. The house was badly damaged, so much so that repairing is about impossible, and the loss will overbalance the insurance, which is $125, with Messrs. J. H. Boatwright & Son. The house was owned by Thos. Brown and occupied by Victoria Larkins, colored, and another colored woman named Walker. The Larkins woman lost about all of her furniture.

When the second alarm was turned in the engine reel of the "Atlantic" and the truck of the Fifth Ward Hook & Ladder Co. responded in charge of their respective drivers, but there was a decided absence of the members of the two companies.

Wanted—A Base Ball Team.

Now that the base ball season is in full blast it is about time for our boys to "get together" and see what can be done towards organizing a team to meet all comers. Wilmington has some of the best ball material in the State, and if this material was woven together as it should be, Wilmington would have an invincible ball team. Up to a few years ago Wilmington had good teams, as the past record of the old Seasides and many others will show, and there is no reason why she shouldn't have one equally as good this season.

The Union was called to order by Jessie S. Canaday, Moderator. Robt. H. Hewlett, pro tem., called the roll of churches and delegates and read the minutes, which were approved.

The committee on religious exercises announced that the exercises of to-day (Sunday) would be Sunday School Mass Meeting at 10 o'clock a. m.; Preaching by M. C. Walton at 11 a. m. and an Orphanage Rally at 2.30 p. m.

The Union then proceeded to the discussion of the queries:

First Query: "Are church festivals, fairs and other entertainments conducive to the spiritual growth of the church?" Answer: "Everything in the Bible is in opposition to church fairs and festivals. They are not conducive to spirituality."

Second Query: "Is sinless perfection or complete holiness of the Christian in the earthly life taught in the Scriptures?" Answer: "All men are subjects of sin and temptation. Christians are at war against the world, the flesh and the devil, and will never be at liberty to lay down their arms until they enter through the pearly gates into the holy city in eternity."

Third Query: "What is the duty of the pastor toward the Church?" Answer: "The pastor must preach the Word in due season, teach the doctrines of the Bible, take the oversight of each and every individual member of the Church, visit the sick, and each family of the Church, and hold family prayer with them, and look to the spirituality of the Church."

Fourth Query: "What are the elements necessary to constitute true Christianity?" Answer: "To know Christ as my personal saviour from sin, through faith in Him and repentance toward God. And to be His loving servant, to follow and obey Him in every good word and work."

The union then adjourned to meet again at Bethlehem Baptist church, in Pender county, N. C., the fifth Sunday in August next.

WORK OF INCENDIARIES

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT AN EARLY HOUR THIS MORNING.

The Hemenway Public School Building Burned—Loss Estimated at $17,000—Insured for $15,000.

The handsome Hemenway School building was consumed by fire early this morning; seventeen thousand dollars worth of property going up in the flames.

About 2 o'clock this morning an alarm of fire was sent in from box 39, corner of Sixth and Princess streets, followed immediately by an alarm from box 38, Fourth and Grace streets. The cause of the alarms was soon evident, as the handsome Hemenway School building, bounded by Fourth, Fifth, Chesnut and Grace streets, was seen to be one mass of flames, which sent up thousands of sparks, endangering buildings for blocks around. The smoke from the fire was so dense that the fire department had great difficulty in fighting it and did remarkable work under the existing circumstances. So rapid was the progress of the fire that at 2.19 o'clock the roof fell in, leaving only the walls of the building standing, which were being fast consumed by the fire. But the flames, fortunately, were powerless to proceed further, as the firemen stood as grim sentinels guarding its further progress.

ORIGIN OF THE FIRE.

There is no doubt that the fire was the work of fire-bugs, as reports gathered by a STAR representative will show. Probably the first to discover the fire was Daniel Evans, colored. Evans lives at No. 216 North Sixth street, between Chesnut and Grace, and between 1.30 and 2 o'clock this morning, having just returned home from work, was sitting at the upstairs front window of his house, which fronts the rear of the school building, smoking and casually glancing out the window. Suddenly he heard a muffled explosion and then receding footsteps, and happening once more to glance out of the window saw a small light at the southeastern corner of the school house, main building, which immediately sprang into a light blaze, wrapping the entire corner of the building in flames. Evans jumped to the window and cried "Fire!" and some one responded by immediately sending in the alarm from box 33.

Mr. Ike Bear, who also lives on Sixth street, between Chesnut and Grace, was awakened by the dreaded cry of fire, and together with his brother, Mr. Sam. Bear, Jr., went over to the scene of the fire, and together with two colored men, who had come up in the meantime on the Atlantic reel, commenced to fight the fire, but were unable to suppress the flames. Mr. Sam. Bear says when he arrived on the scene that the flames extended from the southeastern corner of the building for about twenty feet around the lower floor of the house.

Mr. Jeff Sellers, who lives in rear of the building, stated that he heard the explosion, as did several others.

Mr. Charles Lewis, who lives on Fifth street, between Chesnut and Grace, and Mr. George Peschau, who lives on the corner of Fifth and Grace streets, were among the first to arrive at the fire and stated that the building at that time was one mass of flames.

THE INSURANCE, ETC.

The Hemenway School house was built about seven years ago, and together with heating apparatus cost about $17,000. It is insured for about $12,000, with the following agencies, viz: Willard & Giles, J. H. Boatwright & Son, F. H. Stedman, Dr. W. W. Harriss, W. W. Hodges, and Atkinson & Son.

Owing to the hour it was impossible to get the amount of the different policies further than $3 750 with Willard & Giles, $3.000 with F. H. Stedman and $1,200 with J. H. Boatwright & Son.

At 3 o'clock this morning all that is left of the handsome two-story structure and contents, consisting of desks, etc., is one mass of debris, on which the flames were slowly dying. The primary one-story building, a few yards from the main building, still stands, although slightly damaged.

The fire department is still on duty. The repeated ringing of the fire alarm from boxes 38 and 33 ran the alarm down, but only a few minutes elapsed before Superintendent McIlhenny had the alarm wound up again and ready for use.

GOING TO NASHVILLE.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 29.

Governor Russell and party will leave to-morrow afternoon for Nashville. About twelve members of the staff will accompany the Executive.

June seventh has been set aside as Raleigh day at the Woman's Exposition in Charlotte. An effort is being made to carry a large party from here on the occasion.

The Summer School and Law School at Wake Forest begin June 28th.

The State Board of Examiners is in session here.

Major W. M. McPheeters, of St. Louis, a well known physician in that place, arrived here to-day. This is Major McPheeter's first visit to North Carolina in sixty years, when he graduated from the State University.

There is the usual commencement rush on all passenger trains. Raleigh is in the very midst of nearly all the educational institutions.

Capt. W. H. Day will join the Governor's party and make the trip to Tennessee.

The directors of the Agricultural and Mechanical college will meet here in two weeks. It is very likely that some action will be taken with regard to the experiment station. It seems to be unsettled whether this department is under the control of the college or the Agricultural Department.

The experiment station at Southern Pines will be continued, so I. C. L. Harris tells me.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 30, 1897

REPUBLICAN TESTIMONY.

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls is a pretty good Republican, and he is also a pretty plain talker when he talks in earnest. He is a Western man, and feeling the necessity of something to better the condition of his section, perhaps, makes him the more candid and plainspoken. In a recent letter, speaking of the condition as he sees it, he says:

"Since the election in November I have been in all parts of the country, from San Francisco to Boston, from Montreal to Atlanta, and it is the concurrent testimony that times have never been harder nor money scarcer than now. Every branch of industry languishes. Rents, incomes, interest and profits have dwindled. Prices of land, farm products and general commodities have sunk lower and lower, till in many localities the most valuable improved farms in rich regions are absolutely unsalable. Nature has been beneficent; harvests abundant; there has been the early and the latter rain; the Mississippi valley is burdened with cribbed corn; crop prospects were never better; skilled and crude labor is plenty; the equipment of machinery is unrivaled, we have all the conditions for good times, but they linger. Possibly they are coming, but they are not here. Many will not be able to wait much longer for their arrival. Multitudes have already fallen from affluence to need, and many other multitudes have sunk from comfort to penury and want of daily bread."

In the last campaign Mr. Ingalls did some service for the Republican party although he was not in full accord with it on the financial question. He believed in the free coinage of silver but he declined to go as far as Senators Teller, Dubois and others did to secure it. He stuck to the party and took his chances with it. We give him credit for too much intelligence to suppose that he believed the election of McKinley would bring prosperity to the country, or that increasing tariff taxation would do it. As an intelligent man he ought to know that times have been getting worse for years, that property has been depreciating, farm products becoming almost worthless, depression in all kinds of legitimate business becoming more and more pronounced, and all of this time with the exception of three years we had a protective tariff, and for four of them the highest protective tariff we ever had. Even during the three years we have excepted we had a protective tariff as high as any before the McKinley tariff, so that the ills complained of which Mr. Ingalls so forcibly describes cannot be attributed to the lack of protection. But the people, whose memories are short, and who are easily persuaded by glib tongued men to whom they had entrusted the office of thinking for them in matters referring to public policies, may have been deceived, very many of them at least, into believing that the success of the Republican party would insure good times speedily. Mr. Ingalls helped to encourage that belief by advocating the election of McKinley.

But now he puts the Republican statesmen on their guard and thus predicts what may happen if they fail to make good their promises:

"The people are patient. They are rational. They do not expect miracles, but they are tired of adversity. They are not looking for the miraculous draught of fishes or the change of water into wine, but they want to see credit and business raised from the dead. They would like to have idle men who are willing to work earning wages. It does not console them to be told that there is a surplus of money in banks to loan at small interest. They don't want to borrow money, but to sell corn. The man who mortgaged his farm five years ago for a fourth of its value would like to have it sell for enough at least to pay the debt. They will give the Republican party a fair chance, as they gave the Democrats four years ago. Should we fail to secure public revenue and restore prosperity they are likely to try some other experiment. Sometimes a sick man who has found no relief from the regular physicians buys a bottle of patent medicine or consults a faith doctor and gets well."

Patient! Well, we should say so. For twenty odd years they have been looking for better times and have been patiently waiting for the statesmen to bring them about—patient even after all the deception that was practiced upon them and all the abuse and plundering to which they had been subjected. Prosperity must be restored, he says, or there will be a fearful retribution for the Republican party.

But how is it going to be restored? By increasing the price of the things the people have to buy? How is that going to help the Western farmer, whose cribs are busting with corn that he can't sell? How will that help him to pay off the five or ten year old mortgages? They must do something besides that to bring prosperity back. Will increasing the revenue do it? That will help the Government, of course, but every dollar that goes into the Treasury comes out of the pockets of the people. Revenue will not raise the price of corn or cotton, nor help to pay off mortgages. The deficiency of revenue has nothing to do with low prices, depression in business nor hard times, for we had all these when there was a surplus in the Treasury and the Republicans were passing pension bills and other swindles to get rid of it, in which Mr. Ingalls as Senator zealously helped. They must bring prosperity, and do more than "secure public revenue," which cuts a small figure as a factor in the business depression.

If prosperity should come it will not come through any high tariff quackery. It will come from causes with which the tariff has no possible relation. A big war in Europe might put up the price of products, breadstuffs, &c., and thus bring into the country a great deal of money, just as the rumors of war a few months ago sent wheat and corn up. The tariff will not do it, but will, on the contrary, unless there should be a large foreign demand for our farm products, make the general condition worse.

It isn't higher tariff but more money the people want, not money locked up in the vaults of the Eastern money lenders, but money among the people, money that would enable them to buy the things they need and relieve the farmers and manufacturers of the surplus that is on their hands. What the condition requires to relieve the strain is open mints and more banks, banks that would take, use and distribute the silver that would be coined and thus put it into circulation. The locked up money of the East is practically no money. It is as so much unstamped paper or so much undug metal. Turn it loose, double the volume we are reputed to have in circulation and the terrible incubus will be lifted and prosperity will come.

MINOR MENTION.

The Washington Star is an independent paper politically, but it arraigns the Senate tariff bill as an inconsistent, Trust-dictated measure for which the Republican party cannot afford to assume the responsibility. Commenting upon Senator Aldrich's speech in introducing the bill it says:

"It reads smoothly. But it does not bear examination.

"With reference to the proposed increase of the tax on beer, Mr. Aldrich simply shows how much money can be derived from that source, and takes the ground that the beverage can stand it. He ignores entirely the position of his party with regard to taxation. Last year's battle was won on the issue of protection, which means, if anything, the collection of revenue at the customs houses. An increase of internal revenue is no part of a protection policy. That way may be made to lead to free trade. Mr. Aldrich has simply cut down protection rates in the Dingley bill, made up the difference by an additional tax on beer and a tax on tea, and now presents the proposition in the light of giving the party choice between a bill which with the beer and tea taxes will yield a surplus, but without them will yield a deficiency of revenue. It was in that way the income tax was crammed down the throats of the Democrats in the Fifty-third Congress. The party had never declared for an income tax, and such a tax had no proper place in a bill drawn in obedience to the Chicago platform of 1892; but the tax was incorporated into the Wilson bill and forced through Congress with the threat that, without it, the bill would not raise revenue enough.

"The matter of the differential sugar duty for the benefit of the refiners is arrayed in the bewildering babiliments of export table and comparisons.

"But it is not until the Hawaiian reciprocity treaty is reached that Mr. Aldrich takes the rag off the bush. His proposition as to that is that the American people do not care to longer pay a bounty of seven or eight million dollars a year to Hawaiian sugar planters. Therefore he would take steps to change the terms of the treaty. Mr. Aldrich knows full well that that is not an honest statement of the case. The American people are paying no bounty to the Hawaiian sugar planters, but, on the contrary, are reaping great advantages from a reciprocity treaty which deals most generously with American products in Hawaii, and which attracts here the most valuable Hawaiian trade. All of this without regard to existing political conditions, which lead the great majority of the American people to desire the annexation of the Hawaiian islands. What authority has Mr. Aldrich for speaking for the American people on this point? How many of those people appeared in person, or by proxy, before his sub-committee and asked for this stab at the treaty? And who were they? And what arguments did they employ to bring the sub-committee to their view of the question. Mr. Aldrich has yet to disclose his plan for changing the treaty. But that is of no consequence. His real aim is to kill the treaty, and the Senate should so take note.

"The Dingley bill as it passed the House was a fair, just and workable redemption of the tariff promise contained in the St. Louis platform. Mr. Aldrich's manipulation of the measure is a juggle in special interests which the Republican party cannot afford to adopt. It is a trust measure, loaded with peril, and certain if adopted to cost the Republican party the confidence of the country."

The excise features of the Senate bill will meet with obstinate opposition from Republicans as well as Democrats, from Western Republican politicians for political reasons and from protectionists because it is practically an abandonment of the protective idea when they leave the customs and turn to the excise to make up the revenue they need. It is that element principally which the Star voices in the extracts which we have quoted.

We clip the following from the Philadelphia Ledger:

"How a statesman may be 'developed' by his environment was well shown in Senator Cannon's speech on the Tariff bill. Originally a protectionist, from principle, the influence of the people among whom he lives and the bias acquired by considering their interests exclusively made him a free trader. Utah is a State with both mineral and agricultural resources, but Senator Cannon's affiliations are principally with the farmers, and hence he thinks the farmers should have equal consideration with manufacturers in the tariff. If there must be a tariff, and since protection for their products would do them no good, as this country imports a very small amount of farm products, he would give them a bounty. Similarly, as Utah is far inland, and will never see a hostile navy, Senator Cannon has no use for ships and guns and armor plate, but "would rather see the iron works closed than a million farmers shut down." The obvious fact that the closing of every large manufacturing plant spoils the market for all the neighboring farmers was quite overlooked by the Utah Senator, as was also the fact that the farmers share in whatever prosperity the manufacturers enjoy, since much of the money paid to the workmen for wages goes, directly or indirectly, to the farmers for food."

This is a mild criticism on Senator Cannon for "developing" from a protectionist to a "free-trader," but it isn't altogether a happy one, as applied to the Senator from Utah, for he is doing precisely what the protection statesmen are doing—that is looking after the interests of his constituents as he understands them. When simmered down this protection is nothing more nor less than legislation in the interests of certain sections and certain classes, and as such it is supported by the representatives in Congress of those sections and classes. As long as Senator Cannon believed that protection benefitted the people of his State he stood by it just as these Senators do now whose constituents are benefitted by it, but when he found that they were paying too dear for the whistle he changed his tactics and concluded that he would strike for something which would pay them back some of the money they pay out to benefit the constituents of other Senators. That is all. He is as consistent as they are and quite as logical, for they would change their tactics as he has done when the conditions changed and protection began to cost their people more than they made by it.

Senator Tillman added to the gaiety of the occasion by his resolution offered in the Senate, Friday, to investigate the sugar operations by some Senators. In the accompanying speech the pitchfork was in evidence, showing that the gentleman from South Carolina meant business, and didn't care a continental whom he jabbed if the jabbed got in range of the pitchfork, which by the way is usually pictured as a three-pronged implement when it should have four prongs. After such a speech, with such specifications, we do not see how the Senate can do otherwise than order the investigation, and if it should not, we do not see how Senator Smith, whose name was mentioned as one of the speculators, can fail to demand it in vindication of himself. If he should it will be a conclusive admission that the allegations as to him are true. Suppose the investigation be ordered, what then? Will it not in all probability fizzle out as the investigation four years ago did? Can't the accused Senators, or any others who may be summoned as witnesses, appear before the committee and when asked if they have been dabbling in sugar stocks, reply "yes," and substantially tell them it is none of their business, as Senator Quay did when he was interrogated four years ago? They didn't expel Quay, and if they didn't expel him after admitting and making no pretense to explanation or apology, that he did deal in sugar stocks, how can they expel any other Senator for doing what he did? Possibly, the investigation may throw some light on the modus operandi when certain things are desired, and the material out of which some of our law makers are built, and to that extent it may prove interesting, if not edifying, but that's all. No vacant chairs will result from it.

The saw fish weighed 500 pounds and was captured at Cape Lookout by harpooning and shipped by boat to Beaufort and thence to the A. & N. C. for Raleigh. This kind of fish is considered very dangerous. The long saw with its sharp points gives the fish great power of attack.

In speaking of this remarkable number of children we were reminded of the fact that a Guilford man, yet living, has twenty-eight children. We are also reminded that old London Purcell, of upper Robeson, a colored man, left over forty children. At this writing Robeson is ahead.

— Concord Standard: Nevin Archibald has returned from a visit to his sister, Mrs. S. J. Hooks, of Matthews, and says that several days ago Mr. Hooks ran upon a dry land terrapin on the shell back of which his (Mr. Hook's) father carved his initials twenty-four years ago. This specie of tortoise lives for seventy-five years, and this particular one is thought to have seen its fiftieth summer.

A few days ago he rode a bicycle from Concord to his home, a distance of fifty miles, in nine hours. His route was across Cabarrus and Montgomery counties into Stanley. The roads through that section are very rough, and considering his age and excessive weight all wheelmen will admit that it was a good run.

— Lincoln Journal: Mr. Wade Seigle, a well known citizen of the Reepsville section, was found dead near a branch on Mr. C. P. L. Heavner's place near Reepsville, on Thursday of last week. He had gone, accompanied by his wife, to Mr. Heavener's for a load of straw. Mr. Heavener was at work in a field some distance from his house, and leaving his team in care of his wife Mr. Seigle went to the field, traded with Mr. Heavener for the straw and started back to the house. He was gone so long that his wife became uneasy, started to look for him and found him lying by the branch dead. He had been subject to fainting spells and it is supposed that he was seized with one of these and fell dead. He was about 40 years of age.

— Morganton Herald: Messrs. L. P. Hesinger, of Syracuse, N. Y., and C. E. Whitney, of Bessemer City, N. C, two very clever gentlemen, are superintending the King Gold Mining Company's operations in this county. They are operating two gold mines on an extensive scale—one at Scott's Hill, about seven miles north of Morganton, and the other near Esq. J. H. Hoffman's in northeastern Burke. They have recently found a very rich vein at the latter mine, the ore paying, it is said, over $100 per ton. They have taken out some very fine nuggets. It is believed that developments will prove this to be one of the richest mines in this section. The King Gold Mining Company have several large boilers and pumps and the latest improved gold mining machinery at both of their mines.

OUT ON THE SEA.

STELLA PEARL HARRIS.

Out on the sea, the dark, sad sea,
Where the breakers are wildly tossing,
The clouds hang low with misty tears,
For another soul is crossing.
The boat has slipped from the golden sands,
Out on the sea so dreary,
And stern-faced Charon bears away,
To where there is rest for the weary.

Out on the sea, the dark, sad sea,
The waters the oar-is cleaving;
The waves send back to the pebbly shore,
A kiss from the one who is leaving.
It glows and brightens until the air
Is filled with its mournful sweetness,
And it takes its place in the tear-dimmed world
With a more than magic meetness.

Out on the sea, the dark, sad sea,
Where the shadows are grayly sifting,
'Neath the cold, cold hand of icy death
My life and my hopes are drifting.
And all is but darkness and dread despair
In face of the viewless ages.
For 'tis written in letters that scar the soul
That for living death is the wages.

O restless sea! O dark, sad sea!
Whose waters are onward moving,
Bring back a message, thou voiceless wave,
A hope and a promise proving.
But the answer that comes is the surf's sullen roar,
And foam on the waters gleaming;
But in the dim future we know there is dawn,
When we've passed through the darkness of dreaming.

A Sad Mishap.

Walter had a fine large dog,
And a gentle dog was he,
But Walter was bad,
So the tale is sad,
As you will presently see.

One day he climbed on Towser's back—
Climbed like a sailor true.
He pursed up his lip,
Then lashed his whip,
And over the ground they flew.

But Towser spied a spotted cat
Perched on a high board fence.
So with eager eyes
And a panting sigh
He turned his footsteps thence.

He bounded over the fence so high,
With one gigantic stride,
But Walter that day,
We're sorry to say,
Remained on the other side.
—C. J. Tharp in San Francisco Examiner.

Kept Down.

"How old are you now, Cyrus?" asked a visitor.

"I'm 5," said the little man, but with a very disgusted air. "I would have been 6 long ago, only my mamma keeps me in dresses."—Youth's Companion.

Nanny and Jack.

Her uncle gave little Nanny
A jack-in-the-box, with a squeak,
But the squeak of the jack was nothing
To Nanny's terrified shriek.

But soon she conquered her terrors so
And spoke like a brave little tot.
"You think you are real," said Nanny,
"But, truly, you know you're not!"
—H. C. Bunner in St. Nicholas.

Gloom

Of ill health, despondency and despair, gives way to the sunshine of hope, happiness and health, upon taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, because it gives renewed life and vitality to the blood, and through that imparts nerve strength, vigor and energy to the whole body. Read this letter: "Hood's Sarsaparilla helped me wonderfully, changed sickness to health, gloom to sunshine. No pen can describe what I suffered. I was deathly sick, had sick headaches every few days and those terrible tired, despondent feelings, with heart troubles so that I could not go up and down stairs without clasping my hand over my heart and resting. In fact, it would almost take my breath away. I suffered so I did not care to live, yet I had much to live for. There is no pleasure in life if deprived of health, for life becomes a burden. Hood's Sarsaparilla does far more than advertised. After taking one bottle, it is sufficient to recommend itself." MRS. J. E. SMITH, Beloit, Iowa.

NEW YORK, May 29.—In anticipation of Monday's holiday the local contingent covered short contracts to-day with the result of advancing prices finally 1@4 points. At the close the market was steady in tone; sales reached the insignificant total of 29,100 bales, representing a small narrow market, the scope of which has, at best, been confined to a matter of 5 points; most of the months scarcely varied more than 2@3 points. Outside speculation was as listless as ever. The local contingent did no more than to even their contracts for a quarter holiday. While the market closed within a point or two of the best prices of the session, the undertone was rather feeble.

A Choice of Three Things.

Australian judges make jokes that would hardly pass muster on this side of the equator. One of them recently going on circuit arrived at a town where a clean charge sheet was presented for his acceptance, accompanied, of course, with the inevitable pair of white gloves. Having accepted the gift, he returned thanks in these terms:

"This proves that either the district possesses an unusually high standard of morality, or that there is nothing in it worth stealing, or that the police are not active enough to catch criminals."

Leaving his hearers in doubt as to which of the three alternatives he personally favored, the judge smiled sweetly at the local head of the police force and retired from the bench.—Pearson's Weekly.

Maud—Charley stole a kiss from me last evening.

Aunt Kate—The villain! What will you do?

Maud—I was awfully angry with him at first. But when he said he stole it only that he might give it to a poor girl who never had any kisses, then I couldn't help seeing what a noble man he was. So I told him if he thought that poor girl was really destitute, he might as well take another one for her.—Boston Transcript.

TO A MULE OF ARKANSAS.

Thou patient, plodding piece of bone and flesh,
Thou sentient something, tangled in a mesh
Of fatal being, I could weep for thee.
But then, thou couldst as surely weep for me.

Not knowing why nor whither I am driven,
To me the urging lash is likewise given.
Hitched to this drag of life, I may not falter
Nor wander past the pull of rein or halter.

Poor thou, poor I! Yet, comrade, were we free,
The world might lose the little we may be.
Along this straightened path, perhaps, 'tis best
We may not linger, and we dare not rest.

STOPPED THE FIGHT.

A strange piece of property for Rector Warne!

There was nothing to distinguish the rector's red pyle from any worldly fighting cock. It had the same snaky head, the same wicked eyes, the same powerful wings. Its spurs were almost stiff enough to force their way unshod through a leather boot leg, let alone through the neck of any cock that dared to stand up against him.

The rector never would have owned him at all if it had not been for Jake Breece. Jake was the promoter of most of the cocking mains between Coalton and Gabtown. Cockfights between the two rival towns were always popular, but the fight in which the rector won the red pyle rose to the dignity of a historic event. The battle took place at sunset on the last Saturday night of March, which was also pay day. All the sports of both places were on the ground. Bets were made and booked. Bills were passed. Whiskey was drunk. Everybody was excited.

The main was only fairly begun. One speckled 2-year-old from Coalton had been disabled, and the red pyle entered by the Coalton party had just worsted the Gabtown bird. The third match was beginning when "Spike" Wright's boy slid down the embankment and broke into the shouts and oaths of the ring with an excited gesture:

"Cheese it! Here's de preacher! Mr. Warne's right out de udder side o' de bank."

The men started up uneasily, the shouts sinking into guttural silence.

Instead of catching up the birds and returning until Mr. Warne was safely out of the way, little Mike Flynn, who had charge of the remaining Gabtown cocks, turned them all into the ring at once and then disappeared before the crowd from Coalton could punish him for his treachery. The red pyle, beset by four birds at once, was doing his best to hold his own in spite of the terrible odds. Avoiding their attack as well as possible, he finished the bird with which he had been fighting and then attacked the strongest of the three remaining adversaries. The Coalton crowd, frantic at the sight of their champion so unfairly matched, would have trampled under foot the cocks of the Gabtown party, but the referee rose instantly to the occasion and ordered that the remaining three birds of the Coalton crowd should be added to the ring.

In the meantime the rector had pushed on rapidly until he came to the top of the embankment. He paused but an instant to gain breath and to survey the motley crowd below. Then he cried out in ringing tones: "For shame, men! Have you no manhood to set God's living, feeling creatures to torture one another like that?"

Only a few of the men looked around. The rector went on to urge those nearest him to leave such brutal sport and come with him to separate the fighting roosters. Some laughed uneasily; others moved away, while one or two wavered. But as no one complied with his impassioned pleas, the rector pressed through the crowd alone to the edge of the ring.

The cocks were now in battle royal, almost evenly matched. They paid not the slightest heed to what was going on about them. The rector waved his hand once or twice in futile endeavor to frighten them apart and was just reaching out his walking stick to intercept the red pyle when Jake Breece sprang forward, presented his brawny shoulder under the rector's outstretched arm, whirled him quickly around and without heeding his protest began to push him backward up the hill toward the top of the reservoir.

The movement was thoroughly unclerical—more like an awkward colt being backed out of the wrong stall than anything else. The rector would never have found himself in such an undignified position if he had only staid in his study that Saturday night. There he would have been safe and warm and away from all disagreeable sights and sounds. But the rector had a theory that he got some of his best sermons while wandering about the dark corners of his parish.

But, if he must go, why should he choose the night after pay day of all the nights in the month? Why not wait until the wages of the community had got safely into the hands of the saloon keepers and the sporting fraternity and the men had settled down to grumble at the hard times and poor work about the mines? Nobody wanted the rector to be abroad on pay night. His own people did not like their spiritual adviser to see the sights incident to that lively season, and those who were outside the church were still less anxious to have him about—unless, indeed, some member of his flock happened to be "making a holy show of himself" about one of the saloons. Then the scoffers were quite willing that the rector should see all that was to be seen.

But to have the rector come upon a man of his own congregation drunk was one thing, and to have him catch the men in the midst of a cockfight was quite another matter. There might be church law against drunkenness, but there was statute law against cockfighting. Rector Warne was known to deal very tenderly with the weak brethren of his flock who had fallen under the power of the cup, although the men whom he visited and prayed with on the subject did not consider it a pleasant interview. But it was not known just how leniently the rector would regard the subject of cockfighting. Indeed, it was very seriously doubted whether he would deal leniently with the offenders at all.

There was a tradition concerning old Father Hill, who had been the locum tenens in the church of Carbonville many years before, that he enjoyed a match as keenly as any one else. One Sunday afternoon, so the story went, he had chanced upon a crowd under the lee of a culm dump watching a couple of cocks fighting. The old man was declared to have said: "I suppose they got to fighting of their own accord, boys. Nobody would set them to fight on Sunday, I'm sure. Might as well let them have it out now. It's got to be settled some time." But Rector Warne was not Father Hill by any means, and it was more than suspected that he would have called on the police to stop the fight if the promoters of the main had not taken care to choose the reservoir as a battleground just because it was outside the city limits.

It was, therefore, only a partial relief when Jake Breece shouldered the rector to the top of the embankment. Jake paused a moment, purple faced from his exertion and hot with anger. "Now th'd better go," he said. "If I e'd lift th' lup this bank, what does th' think I e'd do to throw th' down that un?"

"Parson," shouted "Pud" Edwards, not unkindly, "you'd better take a walk."

The rector stepped past Breece and faced the ring again. The red pyle and his speckled foe, the only two that were spurred, were now facing each other, panting and covered with blood, each watching the other for a chance to strike and raising and lowering their heads as they feinted and sparred for advantage. The men had ceased to watch the fighting birds and were all looking up at the rector. He pushed forward to the edge of the embankment and balanced himself on the crumbling reservoir as he did sometimes on the edge of the pulpit platform on Sundays before he began his sermon.

"You may throw me down if you will. I have no doubt that you are strong enough to do so," he began in a clear, high voice, speaking to Breece without looking at him. "But I will not go down. Even if you throw me down, I will not be silent. You must hear me. Jacob Breece, and you, James Edwards, and you, William Bugdale, and all the rest of you who are engaged in this shameful business, you are doing a wrong in the sight of Almighty God!"

"When he said William Bugdale," said that individual in telling the story afterward, "it went through me same as a knife. But it beats me to this day to know 'ow he saw me when I was down behind a pile o' ties, where I'd gone after Mick Flynn when he let hall them birds hout on my red pyle. Some'ow I 'ad to stand hup when he called me name, an then he went on to give it to hus the worst you ever 'eard. The judgment day won't be no worse. He took us hup before the white throne like, an it kind o' seemed to me as though he was a-goin to be one o' the witnesses against us hall, the way he went for us there. His voice kep' gettin clearer an solemner—only it was so hawful sad—an then all at once he rung hout a command, like he was blowin on a trumpet, an then stopped:

"'In the name of the Lord Jehovah, I command you to stop this fight instantly!'"

Bill paused for a moment in his tale, and then went on: "He looked grand—nothin short of it. He just looked hawful as he stood there in the last red o' the sunlight, stretchin hup his long harm an never moving a muscle, while you could 'ear the sound of his voice come hechoin back from the mountain above. I felt as if the bank would fall in on me, an I kind o' wished it would. I wanted to go an 'ide meself somewheres—only it seemed as if I couldn't move. The reservoy was as still as a church, hall exceptin the flappin o' them birds down in the middle of the ring. But nobody looked to see which was gettin the best of it. You might 'a' thought we was a-waitin for him to pronounce the benedickshee—only, some'ow, he didn't seem like a preacher either. I'd been to church afore that night—of course I 'ad—but when the parson said it 'ad to stop we never thought he was preachin or nothin. We thought he meant it. I remember I wondered that the birds didn't stop fightin theirselves—an them just gettin 'ot an wild with blood. It wasn't as if some man 'ad said we was to stop. It was as if"—Bill sunk his voice as nearly into a whisper as was possible for him—"it was as if it was some hangel!

"Did the men mind him? Why, they 'ad to mind him! Didn't I tell you it was like the judgment day? Jake Breece could easy have broke his face as he stood there or pitched him 'ead an 'eels down the reservoy bank. But he only made two slidin steps an caught the speckled bird jest as the red pyle was a-holdin him down to carve his 'ead hoff. I grabbed my red pyle right back o' the wings an whopped him into the bag afore he knew what was 'appenin.

"'The match is hoff, permanent,' says Jake Breece.

"'I thank you, men,' says the parson. Then he went on to make hus a speech about kindness to the least of God's creatures; but I forget what it was, hexcept that he said just before he stopped that hevil was wrought for want of 'eart as well as for want o' thought.

"'He'll begin to pray next,' says Jake to me on the quiet. Then he says hout loud, 'This 'ere match bein declared hoff'—

"'It hain't been declared hoff yit,' says Mick Flynn from behind the pile o' ties.

"'Oh, it's hoff all right enough, yo' bla'guard!' says 'Pud' Edwards, swearin at Mick under his breath, for the men was afraid to touch Mick or even to cuss him hout loud while the rector was there.

"'This match bein declared hoff,' says Jake again, louder than ever, lookin straight toward the pile o' ties as he spoke, 'yous sports o'n come an git your stakes.'

"'I don't want no stakes,' says one fellow from Mud Corners. 'Give the boodle to the parson.' 'Nor me neither!' 'Nor me!' yells one an another.

"'Gentlemen, I cannot take your money,' says the rector as perlite as if 'e was refusin a third cup o' tea in a parlor. 'You need the money for your famerlies. Thank you for your good will'— he says, beginnin another speech, but 'Gobbler' White cut him short:

"'Yous men that has famerlies come an git yer hood. Yous sports like me an Jake 'ere and Skinny Bugdale o'n watch an see me put hall that's left of the stuff that's in this box into the 'ands of Mr. Warne to use for missionaryin—or any way he likes.'

"That's hall. Only—I ain't ashamed to tell it, but it seems queer—the rector got hold o' some o' hus, especially me, afore I left the ring, and we was confirmed 'ere last Heaster. I give Mr. Warne my red pyle right there in the ring that night, an I ain't seen him since. The rector was goin to invite his Bible class around to host him once, but I told him I hadn't no 'eart for it. So he give that hup. He tells me now that the red pyle is as peaceable as a turtle dove an stays 'appy an contented like in the back yard of the rectory. Poor fellow! He's gettin hold, I fancy. Well, hall of us has our day."—Gillam W. Ford in Lippincott's Magazine.

A Well Ripened Joke.

Punch has beaten the record in regard to delay in publishing accepted contributions. A good many persons were astonished to see in last week's number a picture of a file of volunteers and an adjutant which looked—so out of date were the uniforms—as if it had been taken from a copy of Punch published in the middle ages. The mystery surrounding this sketch has been cleared up by the artist, Mr. W. Ralston, who explains that it was accepted and paid for by the paper exactly 26 years ago. After this no one can accuse Punch of truckling to the "new" humor. Mr. Burnand evidently likes his fun very old in bottle.—London Figaro.

A Disgusted Scotchman.

A famous astronomer, whose knowledge of arithmetical facts was a dreadful engine of conversation, once diverted himself by asking the company if they were aware of the immense distance they were from heaven. It was, he informed them, so many millions of diameters of the solar system and would take many thousand years to traverse. "I don't know the distance nor the time," exclaimed a Scotchman who was present, "that it would take you to get to heaven. But I know this—it will not take you a millionth part of the time to go to the other place."—San Francisco Argonaut.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

Jerusalem Is Not Disillusionizing to the Western Visitor.

In The Century an article on "The Miracle of the Greek Fire," by Richard Watson Gilder, describes the scenes of Holy Week in Jerusalem. Mr. Gilder says:

A city beautiful! On Palm Sunday, from the stairway near the spot where Mary stood when the body of her Son was taken from the cross, I saw the Greek procession in the Church of the Sepulcher. Then I went over to the Mount of Olives. Looking back from a field well up on the hillside, the whole city lay beneath—the temple area, with the great mosque in full view across the valley of Jehoshaphat. From here Jerusalem, with its clear and stately outline of walls, the domes and minarets of the mosques, and the old towers and churches, has a singular completeness. Perhaps even in Solomon's time, from the outside, though different, it was not more lovely. The warm gray of the stones of the city is the color of the unbleached wool of goats. The hills are darker, with a delicate bloom over them, spotted with gray olive orchards and melting in the distance into violet. It is indeed a city set upon a hill, isolated, distinguished. The picture realizes one's lifelong dream of the city of God.

The sunset sky was wild and cold, with streaks of sunshine. The rain ceased and the air grew warm. In the rich, low light all blemishes were lost, and the City Beautiful was spread before the pilgrim's eyes. Perhaps it was board that Christ wept over Jerusalem. Along or near this path he must have come on the day of his "entry" on the first Palm Sunday, whose feast was being kept this very day throughout all Christendom. There were no other travelers. A few Syrians passed by. I gathered some flowers by the wayside and turned again homeward.

You see that we did not find the Holy Land disillusioning. There are many things that confound the western mind. There are filth and degradation and superstition. But here are the same sky, the same landscape, the same dominating orient. The painter who knows the Holy Land best said to us in Jerusalem, "At times when I look at these fields and realize that this very picture we have reflected in the eyes of Jesus I feel myself shiver." The Bible, no matter what one's theology or philosophy, here takes on a vitality and meaning beyond the power of conception hitherto. Are the places real? Jerusalem, all Syria, is real, and some of the "sacred places" are unquestionable. But you do not have to be sure that the place is exact when you listen, with a new emotion, to the words of Jesus repeated by the French monk on Good Friday, and at that "station of the cross" where Christ cried out, "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and for your children."

True to Life.

The early patroness of Burns, Mrs. Dunlop of Dunlop, had an old housekeeper, an especially privileged person, who had certain aristocratic notions of the family dignity which made the admiration of her mistress for the rustic poet incomprehensible to her. In order to overcome this prejudice, Mrs. Dunlop gave her a copy of "The Cotter's Saturday Night," which she poet had just written.

The old housekeeper read the poem, but when her mistress inquired her opinion of it, she replied with indifference, "Aweel, madam, that's vera weel."

"Is that all you have to say in its favor?" asked Mrs. Dunlop in amazement.

"Indeed, madam," returned the old woman, "the like o' your quality may see a vast deal in 't. But I was aye used to the like o' all that the poet has written about in my ain father's house, and I dinna ken how he could hae described it ony other way."

It is said that Burns counted the old housekeeper's criticism one of the highest compliments he had ever received.

He probably valued it as greatly as a writer of New England stories values a remark once made to her by an old man.

"I should think when you're writin stories you'd like to kind o' make up things more," said this aged critic in a tone of kindly reproof. "Now my wife and I were talkin about your last book the other day, and my wife says to me, 'Why, John, there's just such folks and such things happenin right in this very town as sho's written down in this book, and most likely been well paid for,' and I couldn't stand up for ye against her, for I knew 'twas the truth."—Youth's Companion.

A "Close" Shave.

"What makes my face so dry and dusty?" asked a man in one of the chairs at the hotel barber shop.

"You shave too close," replied the barber. "You get down under the skin and irritate it."

"Well, I have to shave close. I don't want to bother with shaving every day, so I get a shave every other day, and then get a good, close one."

"There's no need of that," replied the barber. "There isn't so much difference between a single going over and a very close shave. After the razor has been over your face once you can still feel a fine stubble. By a second or third scraping you can get the face feeling perfectly smooth. But in three hours' time the beard has grown out to where it was after the first going over. What I mean is that you save only about three hours by getting what we call a 'close' shave, and for a man who shaves every other day that isn't much of an advantage. Besides it irritates the face and is liable to make the skin hard and scaly. A man who shaves himself simply goes over his face once. But in a barber shop the customer thinks he is not getting the worth of his money unless the barber scrapes for about ten minutes to get rid of that extra three hours' growth of beard."—Chicago Tribune.

A Chicago Solomon.

Justice of the Peace Bonnefot is known in Chicago as the "North Side Solomon." Two neighbors had quarreled over the ownership of a mongrel dog. There had been several continuances, witnesses had been sworn and countersworn, and lawyers had wrangled until the justice and the spectators as well were all mixed as to the nature of the original proposition. Toward the close of a wordy session, a butcher's boy, who had stolen into the court with a basket of fresh meat for his employer's customers, started to leave the room. The dog, which had been tied to a leg of the justice's desk, smelled the meat, gave a tug that broke the string and bounded down the stairs after the butcher's boy. The crowd was on the point of rushing out to capture the fugitive dog, when Bonnefot sang out: "Hold on there! If anybody leaves the room, I'll fine him for contempt of court. Let that tam dog go." And the dog went, and went so well that the litigants failed to recover him, and the case was dropped.—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Morning Star.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 30, 1897

TARIFF DEBATE.

An Exciting Incident in the Senate—Senator Morgan Criticises the House of Representatives.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Progress on the Tariff bill in the Senate was checked to-day, the plate glass paragraphs proving a source of controversy lasting throughout the day. As a result little more than a page of the bill was disposed of. The Finance Committee succeeded without difficulty in resisting proposed amendments from Democratic members of the committee, although each amendment was debated at great length.

An exciting incident occurred during the afternoon, when Senator Morgan, of Alabama, was called to order by Mr. Gallinger, who was temporarily in the chair, for severely criticising the inaction in the House of Representatives. Mr. Morgan declared that the Speaker of the House was enforcing an automatic trap-door rule by which Represenatives were assembled and dispersed, and characterized this action as an outrage against popular rights. Mr. Frye, of Maine, first gave warning that a protest would be made against criticism of the other house and when Mr. Morgan vehemently repeated his criticism Mr. Hale made a point of order against him. The temporary presiding officer directed Mr. Morgan to resume his seat and then ruled that he was out of order. The Alabama Senator, somewhat chagrined, was about to appeal from the decision of the chair, when Mr. Hale withdrew his point of order and further friction was avoided. Mr. Morgan resumed his criticisms during the tariff debate and made the point that Congress was not now in session in accordance with the constitution, the House of Representatives having vacated its functions.

After a sharp contest with the Tariff leaders Mr. Quay succeeded in carrying a motion to adjourn over the Decoration day celebration on Monday.

The debate on Mr. Jones' amendment to the plate-glass schedule lasted two hours, and on a yea and nay vote was defeated, 21 to 29. Messrs. Heitfeld, Kyle and Pettigrew voted with the Democrats and Mr. Jones, of Nevada, with the Republicans.

DUEL TO THE DEATH.

Sensational Shooting Affair at Chicamauga, Georgia.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—A special from Chattanooga, Tenn., says: A sensational duel to the death occurred at Chicamauga, Ga., about 7.30 o'clock this morning. The participants were L. J. Barber, chief car inspector for the Chattanooga, Rome & Columbus Railway, and Frank Osborn, a prominent farmer, residing near Chicamauga. Osborn was instantly killed.

A family feud of five years' standing has existed between the Osborns and Barbers. Several days ago Osborn circulated a slanderous report concerning the wife of Barber. Both men declared they would settle the matter at their first meeting, and have been armed since. This morning Barber was at the store of Bonti Bros., making a purchase, when Osborn walked in. Approaching Barber, he began cursing him and accusing him of having acted the part of a rascal, whereupon Barber replied, calling the farmer a liar.

Osborn advanced towards Barber, at the same time drawing a pistol, but before he could use the weapon Barber fired a shot at Osborn which took effect. Osborn fell to the ground mortally wounded, but raising himself up fired at Barber, missing his mark, after which he sank to the floor a corpse. Barber contiued shooting, placing five bullets in the body of Osborn. Barber gave himself up to the sheriff and asked for protection. Osborn has a large following and more bloodshed is expected. Both men are well known throughout this section. Osborn leaves a wife and six children.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIANS.

The General Assembly Closed Its Labors to Meet Next Year in New Orleans.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

CHARLOTTE, May 29.—The thirty-sixth annual Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church was dissolved to-day at 2 o'clock, after a session of ten days in the First Presbyterian church of this city. The morning was devoted to disposing of various reports and resolutions as they came up. The business was of minor importance. The Assembly paid Dr. Goetchius, the moderator, a handsome tribute, testifying to his ability and efficiency. The majority of the commissioners left to-night for their respective homes. The Assembly was a notable one in many respects. There were eleven ex-Moderators present.

The 250th anniversary of the Westminister symbols were celebrated. Doctors Dabney and Hoge were present; a window by the commercial travellers to the memory of the late Rev. John A. Preston, D. D., a member of the Assembly who died last September and at whose invitation the Assembly met here was dedicated.

The next Assembly meets in New Orleans.

A FEMALE LEPER

Under Treatment at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BALIMORE, May 29.—There is a female leper at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, this city. She was taken to the institution several weeks ago suffering from what was supposed to be a skin eruption, but after a careful diagnosis of her case by the physicians at the hospital it was discovered that the woman was a victim of the terrible disease of leprosy. When the truth of the case dawned on the physicians the unfortunate woman was isolated from the rest of the patients, and in that condition she will be kept at the hospital until arrangements can be made with the health authorities to remove her elsewhere. The woman is a native of this city, and is thought to have contracted the terrible malady a number of years ago while in the West Indies.

SEACOAST DEFENCE.

Bids Opened for Supplying Cast Iron Projectiles for Siege Cannon.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The ordnance department of the army has just opened bids for supplying about 1,994 cast iron projectiles for seacoast and siege cannon, the lowest bidders in each class being the Tredegar Company, of Richmond, Va., at the following rates: 500 7-inch 125 pound siege shells, $5.50 each; 200 8-inch 200 pound seacoast shells, $7.90 each; 200 10-inch 575 pound seacoast shots, $18.50 each; 300 12 inch 1,000 pound seacoast shots, $19 each, and 604 12-inch 800 pound mortar shells, $33 each.

A shock of earthquake was felt in various parts of Greece yesterday and especially severe at Lumia and Patras. The disturbance was slight in Athens.

EASTERN SITUATION.

THE TURKISH GOVERNMENT PLAYING A DOUBLE GAME.

The Sultan's Show of Resistance to the Powers Attributed to German Influence—Rumors of Negotiations Between Turkey and Russia.

[Copyright 1897 by the Associated Press.]

LONDON, May 29.—The negotiations at Constantinople have entered upon the anxious stage, owing to doubts as to the real intentions of the Sultan, whether he means to resume the war or not. A spirit of conciliation is shown at the Yildiz Kiosk towards the ambassadors, but the Turkish government is playing a double game and is inciting public opinion secretly to oppose the abandonment of Thessaly.

The Sultan affects to be greatly afraid of the Islamic party, and the attitude of the Grand Vizier, as shown by the report which he presented to the Sultan on Saturday last urging that the whole of Islam was fully determined to retain Thessaly, and tendering his resignation in case Abdul Hamid differed with these views, has strengthened the suspicion that the Sultan is prepared to plead that Islamic pressure is the reason for not yielding to the Powers. Advices from Thessaly show that agents of the Turkish Government have been calling upon the Thessalian Mussulmans and Spanish Hebrews to protest against the evacuation of Thessaly and that the few Greeks who have not fled dare not refuse to join the movement.

The Sultan's show of resistance to the Powers is generally attributed to German backing, but it is also rumored that negotiations between Turkey and Russia have been proceeding this month relative to the eventual administration by Russia of a portion of Asia Minor.

No confirmation has yet been received of the reports that the embassies at Constantinople had received word from their respective ministers at Athens that the position of the Greek royal family is so critical that the King is practically barricaded in his palace and is making preparations to leave Athens in order to escape the fury of the populace.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 29.—The ambassadors of the Powers in their reply to the Porte's note of May 28th (saying the Turkish government consents to negotiate for peace provided the Greek commanders first sign an armistice and that so soon as this is done the Turkish government will negotiate the peace conditions with the ambassadors, the treaty to be signed by the Turkish and Greek plenipotentiaries in Thessaly) announced to-day that they do not object to the conclusion of a military armistice and will take steps at Athens with the object of securing it. But in the meanwhile they are of the opinion that the discussion of the peace conditions should begin without delay.

The Jacobites are preparing to celebrate the marriage of H. R. H. Princess Mary Louise Theresa and H. R. H. The Prince of Calabria by a banquet on White Rose Day, June 10th. The Princess Mary is, after her elder sister, the direct representative of the Stuart line and the Prince of Calabria is the son of ex-King of Naples, whose portrait was drawn by Alphonse Daudet and the King of Illyria in his "les rois in exile."

The manuscript of a new comedy by W. S. Gilbert is in the hands of Miss Fortescue, who is waiting for a favorable opportunity to produce it. If she is unable to find a suitable London theatre she will play it during her next provincial tour.

PARIS, May 29.—In the Chamber of Deputies to-day M. Vallo, progressist, representing the district of Epernay, expressed astonishment that such a discourse as the one delivered by Father Ollivier at the obsequies in Notre Dame Cathedral of the charity bazaar victims should have been allowed.

The Premier, M. Meline, denied that the cabinet was clerical. He said the government always applied the law with firmness and, in the case of the ceremony at Notre Dame, followed the example of M. Goblet, after the fire at the Opera Comique. M. Goblet thereupon twitted M. Meline with always shielding himself behind precedents in religious services. In the present case, he added, the government had begged the nobility to send the bodies of the victims to Notre Dame. This remark was greeted with loud protests, after which the order of the day was demanded by the government, adopted by the Chamber and afterwards the House approved the general policy of the government by a vote of 296 to 281.

MADRID, May 29.—In a speech at the Liberal Club to-night, Senor Moret Y. Prendergast, the Liberal leader and former minister, made an attack upon Premier Canovas del Castill, who he declared was responsible for the absence of the Liberal members from the sessions of Parliament.

Senor Moret also blamed the Government members for having passed the indemnity bill during the absence of the opposition.

TILLMAN'S RESOLUTION.

Will Be Reported Back to the Senate by Committee.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Senator Jones, of Nevada, chairman of the committee which controls the contingent expenses of the Senate, to which was referred the Tillman resolution for an investigation of the reports of speculation in sugar stocks by Senators, conferred informally with his colleagues on the committee and made an agreement to report the resolution back to the Senate. Senator Tillman says when it is reported he will insist upon prompt consideration and that if it is not soon reported he will move the discharge of the committee.

VERMONT TRAGEDY.

A Young Woman's Attempt at Murder and Suicide Likely to Prove Successful.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

MONTPELIER, Vt., May 29.—Miss Mildred Brewster, the daughter of a wealthy farmer of Huntington, to-day shot Miss Annie Wheeler, of whom she is alleged to have been jealous, inflicting wounds which the physicians state will probably prove fatal. The deed was committed in a lonely spot on the outskirts of this city. After shooting Miss Wheeler, the Brewster girl turned the revolver on herself and fired a bullet into her right ear, inflicting a serious wound, which will probably prove fatal.

FIRE AT GREENSBORO.

Several Business Houses Burned—Loss About $20,000.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 29.—Greensboro suffered the largest fire she has had in ten years this morning. The fire started in the Eagle Foundry, owned by W. J. Teague, at about 5 o'clock. From there it spread to the dry goods store of A. A. Hinkle and Hodgin, Pegram & Co.; from there to the old knitting mill building, owned by S. S. Brown; thence to an empty brick building owned by Messrs. C. & J. Gorrell. The large building occupied by W. G. Mebane Grocery Company, also caught fire, but was extinguished after a hard fight. Loss about $20,000, partly insured.

RUIZ INVESTIGATION.

The Commission Closed Its Labors Yesterday—The Report Believed to Have Been Sent to Washington.

By Cable to the Morning Star.

HAVANA, May 29.—The commission conducting the inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the death of Dr. Ruiz closed its labors at an early hour to-day. A mysterious messenger from Washington came from Tampa on the steamer Mascotte this morning, but did not land. Mr. Fishback, secretary of the commission, with Consul General Lee's son, went on board the steamer before she sailed and held a brief consultation with the stranger, and it is supposed that they delivered to him the report of the commission and other highly important dispatches from Consul General Lee and Mr. Calhoun, who was selected to investigate Dr. Ruiz's death, to be conveyed to the State department at Washington.

The messenger was registered upon the Mascotte's inward passenger list as H. M. Kimball, and the same name appeared on the steamer's outward list. Dr. Jose Congosto, the Spanish consul at Philadelphia, who represented the Spanish Government in the inquiry, is also understood to have forwarded a long report to Senor de Lome, the Spanish Minister at Washington, by to-day's mail. Messrs. Calhoun, Fishback and Congosto will leave next Thursday for New York direct.

HAVANA, VIA KEY WEST, May 29.—Of the two reports understood to have been sent from Havana to-day by the commission investigating the death of Dr. Ruiz, the one by Mr. Calhoun, who represents the United States, and the other by Dr. Jose Congosto, the Spanish consul at Philadelphia, who acts for the Spanish Government, the former will, it is said, agree with the statement of Consul General Lee, that Dr. Ruiz died from concussion of the brain, the result of violence, after solitary confinement of more than thirteen days regardless of his treaty rights.

Consul General Lee declined at yesterday's session of the commission to question the witnesses, who were interrogated only by the Spanish representative. Consul General Lee will shortly make a report on the Ruiz case, and Mr. Calhoun will make a further report on other matters, such as the money question, the state of the insurrection, the condition of American interests and the general suffering due to Captain General Weyler's conduct of the campaign.

Consul General Lee's position is just what it was in February last. He holds that Spain is responsible, since Ruiz died, because he was deprived of his treaty rights.

The exact facts as to how Dr. Ruiz received the blow which killed him Gen. Lee and Mr. Calhoun could not learn because half of the witnesses examined by the commission were prisoners and, it is believed, were afraid to testify fully. The remaining witnesses were the jailors who would not testify so as to incriminate themselves.

The relief of suffering Americans by Consul General Lee goes on daily. Several hundred have already been assisted.

A prominent and influential Spanish resident of Havana upon being questioned with reference to the suggested sale of Cuba, authorized the representative of the Associated Press to tell the American press that he favors the sale of Cuba, not to the Cubans but the United States, for the sake of avoiding in the future, ruin, desolation and bloodshed. "The sale of the island to the Cubans" he said, "means a step backward and carries us to barbarism, as many of the chiefs of the actual revolution were formerly bandits. The United States, as an industrious country, symbolizes progress and civilization and the Spanish residents in Cuba cannot be indifferent to the welfare of Cuba, having fertilized the island with the sweat of their brows and they will always protest against the sale of the island to the Cubans."

EL PASO'S FLOOD.

Fully 2,500 People Driven from Their Homes—Impossible to Estimate the Loss.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

EL PASO, TEX., May 29.—This morning a mass meeting of the citizens of El Paso was held to organize for the relief of 1,800 destitute people, whose homes were swept away by the flood. People are still moving out of the flooded districts and employing boats to transport their household goods across to the main land, where they can be reached by wagons. Fully 2,500 people have been driven from their homes in this city and East El Paso, and 3 000 of that number are in destitute circumstances. It is impossible to estimate the damage done by the flood, but it is especially severe because a very large percentage of the sufferers are poor laborers. The river has changed its course considerably, and those who for years have watched the antics of the erratic Rio Grande say that when the flood recedes it will be discovered that the river has shifted its course, leaving about fifty blocks of El Paso on the Mexican side of the stream. Among the buildings certain to be sweeped over on the Mexican side of the river will be the International Copper Smelting plant. The current of the river in the lower end of the city is now on Fourth street, six squares from the original bank of the river.

Indian Troubles at Duck Lake—Three Whites Killed and Four Wounded

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

REGINA, N. W. T., May 29.—Twenty-five mounted policemen, under command of Assistant Commissioner McIlroe and Inspector MackDonnell, left here this morning for the scene of the Indian troubles at Duck Lake. They took with them a Maxim gun, and will capture the rebellious red skins at any cost. An unfortunate feature is that the young men are deserting the reserves and joining Almighty Voice. Three whites have been slain and four wounded.

WINNIPEG, MAN., May 29.—An engagement took place last night between the Indian Almight Voice and his followers, and the mounted police force. In the battle Corporal Hock s, Constable Kerr and a citizen of Duck Lake, named Grundy, were killed. The bodies of Grundy and Kerr still remain in the bush where the engagement took place. Every available member of the mounted police force is being hurried to the scene.

BICYCLE EVENTS.

Word's Competitive Record Broken at Boston—Racing at Baltimore—A Wheelman Seriously Injured.

By Telegraph to the Morning Star.

BOSTON, May 29.—A world's competitive bicycle record was twice broken at Charles River Park to-day. In the first trial heat of the third mile open amateur, which was a brilliant piece of sprinting, Ellery Blake, of Keene, N. H., went to the front at the pistol shot and remained there throughout, winning the heat in 42 2 5, which broke the existing record of 43 seconds, made by Packard in Denver, July 13th, 1895. But Blake had not done his best work of the day, for in the final heat of this event he went to the fore and won in 41 4-5, thus lowering his own record.

BALTIMORE, May 29.—The opening cycle race meet of the season was held here to-day at Electric Park. The weather was fine and the attendauce and racing good. As the result of a collision in the second race Carroll Jack, of Reading, was stunned and injured internally. The riding of Griffin Halstead, of Washington, was a feature of the races.

Half mile open professional: Al Newhouse, Buffalo, won; Oldfield, Toledo, second; G. Ball, Washington, third. Time 1.07 2 5.

MATTERS IN MAXTON.

Mrs. Kinsey's Musical Entertainment—The Projectoscope—Industrial Enterprises—Death of a Sister of Rev. W. M. Jones—Distinguished Visitors.

[Special Star Correspondence.]

MAXTON, N. C., May 29.

The lovers of harmony were highly entertained last Wednesday night in the armory by Mrs. J. H. Kinsey's large music class. Mrs. Kinsey has charge of the music department of all of the schools of Maxton and her work is of such a character as to convince her patrons their children are getting the very best training. She is a daughter of the late Dr. Robey, of the North Carolina Conference, and for some time a resident of Wilmington. Among other entertainments of the past week was the Edison projectoscope.

The Maxton Sash, Blind and Door factory, machine shops and foundry, dry kiln and planing mills, cotton factory, and carriage factory, as well as all other local enterprises are running on full time and turning out the best of work, as they patiently await the promised return of prosperity. "Labor and wait" is the Maxtonian motto.

The Bank of Maxton will be organized in the Fall.

Frequent praise of the STAR is heard for its arrangements of news, and especially of its intelligent condensation; news in a nutshell, as it were. It is emphatically a business man's paper.

A telegram announcing the death of a sister of Rev. W. M. Jones, pastor of the Baptist church here, was received from Baltimore Thursday. Mr. Jones was away on a visit to Wake Forest.

Mrs. M. Bradshaw is visiting relatives in Tarboro.

Capt. Jas. F. Johnston and wife, of Birmingham, Ala., are spending a month in Maxton, guests of the Maple Shade Inn. Capt. Johnston is a brother of the Governor of Alabama. Making Lincoln Presentable.

In narrating "When Lincoln Was First Inaugurated" in The Ladies' Home Journal, Stephen Fiske writes interestingly of the memorable journey from Springfield, Ills., to the national capital, and tells of Mrs. Lincoln's efforts to have her husband look presentable when receiving a delegation that was to greet them upon reaching New York city.

"The train stopped," writes Mr. Fiske, "and through the windows immense crowds could be seen. The cheering drowned the blowing off of steam by the locomotive. Then Mrs. Lincoln opened her handbag and said:

"'Abraham, I must fix you up a bit for these city folks.'

"Mr. Lincoln gently lifted her upon the seat before him. She parted, combed and brushed his hair and arranged his black necktie.

"'Do I look nice now, mother?' he affectionately asked.

"'Well, you'll do, Abraham,' replied Mrs. Lincoln critically. So he kissed her and lifted her down from the seat and turned to Mayor Wood, courtly and suave, and to have his hand shaken by the other New York officials."
